

How to get water information affecting the Sacramento Valley

NCWA
Northern California Water Association

We live in an age where we are challenged with how to manage the vast amounts of information that surrounds us every day. For those interested in water information affecting the Sacramento Valley, the following provides some thoughts on the different ways to be engaged and stay on top of water information. Recognizing the challenge with information management, we are always interested in any other thoughts or ideas on how we can help you through our communications programs and provide you with timely information.

SacramentoValley.org

The California Rice Commission and Northern California Water Association host sacramentovalley.org, which showcases the region and highlights the importance of water to this special region. We encourage you to follow and engage with this site through your preferred social media platform(s). We also encourage you to follow the California Rice Commission and its social media at: calrice.org.

SACRAMENTO VALLEY

Learn more:
SacramentoValley.org

 Sacramento Valley Water

 @SacValleyCA

 sacvalleyca

Current Water News

There are several very good sources that aggregate California water news with different styles. We guess that many folks already subscribe to these services. If not, here are several aggregated sources, which we encourage you to both subscribe and support:

- What Are They Saying? – NCWA
- Weekly Water Roundup – NCWA
- Aquaforia, hosted by the Water Education Foundation: watereducation.org/aquaforia
- Maven's Notebook, hosted by Chris Austin: mavensnotebook.com
- BC Water News, hosted by Brown and Caldwell: register.bcwaternews.com

NCWA on Twitter

In addition to these social media channels, you can follow NCWA on twitter @DavidGuyNCWA, @GaryLink or @SacValleyWQ. You can also follow many Northern California water agencies on twitter by searching for their name or by calling us.

Water Briefings

Water Briefings, a publication from the Northern California Water Association, is published periodically and provides a detailed description for a particular water topic (i.e., Bay-Delta, groundwater, salmon, water quality) that is important to the Sacramento Valley.

Infographics

Our various infographics and other communications documents are available on the website, or you can contact us if you need copies of any of these documents.

Norcal Water Insight

The weekly NCWA blog and other timely topics are sent to you through the Norcal Water Insight.

NorCalWater.org

The NCWA website norcalwater.org is a good source for information on NCWA and Sacramento Valley water.

For more information or to share your thoughts, please call us at 916.442.8333 or email us at info@norcalwater.org.